3. The Collaborative Project Template

Safety, Belonging and Mattering

Give Your Tribe What They Crave

To become resilient and shift to our Smart State (where we more easily navigate change, experience reduced stress, and perform at our very best), we must have safety, belonging, and mattering. But how do you know who needs what, when?

Very often you don't even have to ask if a team member needs safety, belonging, or mattering; their behavior says it all. Here's our SBM (Safety, Belonging, Mattering) Behavior Decoder to help you give your team what they need.

Lot of SAFETY

Lot of BELONGING

Lot of MATTERING

Nurture Safety by:

- Talking with them about their concerns and forming contingency plans
- Normalizing their experience as something that happens during growth and change
- Assuring them you have their back, and you're in this together.

Nurture Belonging by:

- Telling them how happy you are that they're on the team
- Asking for their ideas on increasing communication and information sharing
- Involving them in a team project

Nurture Mattering by:

- Calling out their key strengths
- Having them lead a key initiative
- Talking about the difference they are making, how valued and appreciated they are

When we give people what they crave, their critter brain calms down and we can guide them into their Smart State.

This is where true rapport, connection, alignment, enrollment, and engagement live. And high performance, collaboration, and sustainability are the results!

Remember, Safety + Belonging + Mattering = Trust.

With Safety, Belonging, and Mattering, we:

Increase employee retention by 90% or more

Increase individual productivity by 35-50%

Increase profit per employee by 22% or more

8. The Debate Template

Debate Template

International Format

Canadian National Debating Format: A brief guide

This is the style that the senior division of this tournament will be debating in. Each team consists of two debaters, and the teams are called the "Proposition" and "Opposition". Like cross-examination, the resolution must be interpreted in a fair and accurate way to reflect the "intended debate". Squirreling is not allowed. Each speaker makes a constructive speech and a rebuttal, and may offer points of information during the oppositions' speeches. The order and length of speeches is:

Order Time (min):

(Proposition) First Prop Speaker - Constructive Speech 8 minutes
(Opposition) First Opp Speaker - Constructive Speech 8 minutes
(Proposition) Second Prop Speaker - Constructive Speech 8 minutes
(Opposition) Second Opp Speaker - Constructive Speech 8 minutes
(Opposition) First Opp Speaker - Summary/Rebuttal 4 minutes
(Proposition) First Prop Speaker - Summary/Rebuttal 4 minutes

Speaker Roles:

First Proposition Speaker: has to define the terms, establish the caseline and give the case division (who covers what points). This speaker will normally have two or three constructive arguments. The first speaker must make the team's approach crystal clear.

First Opposition Speaker: must clash with the points just made by the first proposition and advance the caseline, case division and normally the first two arguments of the opposition side. In World's Style, this division is usually 2 minutes and 6 minutes, although for our purposes these are just guidelines. The debater should be evaluated on the overall effectiveness of the speech. Constructive argumentation or refutation may be done first, and once again, the judges will consider the effectiveness of the strategy chosen.

Second Proposition Speaker: has to clash with the case presented by the first opposition speaker, and should advance one or two more constructive arguments for the proposition. The speaker should also take time to rebuild the proposition case. The arguments must have been announced in the first proposition speech.

Second Opposition Speaker: should also introduce one or two constructive arguments. These new arguments must have been announced in the first opposition speech. This speaker should also take time to clash with the new constructive matter presented by the second proposition, and summarize the opposition case presented. He/she should NOT engage in an overall summary / rebuttal of the debate.

Summary/ Rebuttal Speeches:

The first speaker on each side, starting with the Opposition, will deliver a four minute summary/rebuttal speech. There is no set format for this speech, given the variety of valid strategies and techniques used. In general, speakers should attempt to summarize the key themes or ideas that have taken place in the debate. This speech tries to put the debate in context and explain the 'crux', or the internal logic of both cases and explains why, on this basis, his/her team has to win. It can examine and summarize the arguments presented, but should focus on the major areas of contention that evolved during the round. During those speeches no
