Allie's process begins with a sketch, carefully planning out the design and color placement for each individual quilt. The use of long descriptive keywords here creates an immersive experience for the reader by allowing them to visualize the colorful world of Allie Aller's creations. From vibrant sunflowers to majestic landscapes, her designs are as diverse as they are captivating.

Once the design is finalized, Allie begins selecting the fabrics needed to bring her vision to life. By carefully choosing fabrics with varying shades and textures, she is able to emulate the intricate details often seen in stained glass. Each fabric is then precisely cut and assembled, much like a mosaic, to form the desired shape and design elements.
