Let's indulge in the seabeds of photography as this time we have gone a bit deeper and made our camera talk with sharks and whales. There's nothing wrong with looking at the surface of the ocean and enjoying the view, except that when you finally see what goes underwater, you realize that you've been missing the bigger picture.

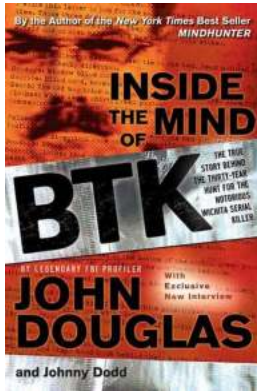

Some underwater photographs might capture marine wildlife, like fish and plants, while other underwater photographs may focus on the landscape. Anup J Kat takes us into a vibrant world and shows us a glimpse of the flora and fauna under the water. Jai Thakur explores Nepal and takes the audience along with him to the mystical land in his series, 'Through Doors and Windows'.

The fantastic take of Henley Spears on marine life is a treat to the eyes and leave you wanting for more. Andrey Shpatak has some amazing shots of the various species of Jellyfish that will leave you spellbound. Emotion hunter, Andrea Izzotti's work on marine life is bound to take your breath away as he captures the life of sea creatures in a way that will leave you in amazement. You might as well hold your breath while you're at it because this issue also features Randy Rocket's work and the product of Muses Photography Workshop on Fine Art Figure Study. The participants' photographs are on display and are a visual delight for anybody who lays eyes on them.
