One of the key factors that sets the Acute Pain Service Platform apart from traditional pain management methods is its well-defined policies and procedures. These guidelines ensure high standards of care and guarantee the best possible outcomes for patients.

Understanding the Policies and Procedures

Acute pain is a complex issue that requires careful attention and specialized treatment. The Acute Pain Service Platform recognizes this and has developed comprehensive policies and procedures to address the diverse needs of patients.

The policies and procedures outline the steps and protocols for pain assessment, treatment planning, monitoring, and post-treatment care. They provide a standardized and systematic approach to pain management, leaving no room for confusion or subpar care.

The platform's policies and procedures cover various aspects of pain management, including:

Assessment and Documentation

Accurate assessment and documentation are crucial for effective pain management. The Acute Pain Service Platform ensures that healthcare professionals adhere to specific guidelines for pain assessment, using validated tools and documenting findings accurately. This ensures that patients' pain levels are accurately measured and monitored throughout their treatment.

Treatment Planning

The platform's policies and procedures also outline the steps for creating personalized treatment plans. These plans take into account individual patient factors, such as medical history, allergies, and potential drug interactions. By considering these aspects, healthcare professionals can design tailored treatment strategies to address each patient's unique pain condition.

Monitoring and Follow-Up

Once a treatment plan is implemented, continuous monitoring and follow-up are crucial to ensure its effectiveness. The Acute Pain Service Platform emphasizes the need for regular assessments, adjusting treatment as necessary to achieve optimal pain relief. This ongoing monitoring allows for timely interventions and reduces the risk of complications.

Post-Treatment Care

Post-treatment care is equally important for patients' recovery. The Acute Pain Service Platform ensures that adequate measures are in place for supporting patients after their pain management treatment. These measures may include providing educational resources, counseling, or recommending further therapies to facilitate a smooth transition to a pain-free life.

The Benefits of Standardized Policies and Procedures

The Acute Pain Service Platform's implementation of well-defined policies and procedures offers numerous benefits for patients, healthcare professionals, and the healthcare system as a whole.

Consistency in Care

By adhering to standardized policies and procedures, patients can expect consistent care, regardless of their location or the healthcare professional they are interacting with. This consistency ensures that all patients receive the highest quality of pain management, reducing variations in outcomes.

Efficient Workflow

The platform's policies and procedures streamline the pain management process, leading to improved workflow efficiency for healthcare professionals. With clear guidelines in place, healthcare professionals can focus on delivering personalized care without wasting time on figuring out next steps.

Enhanced Patient Safety

Standardized policies and procedures significantly contribute to patient safety. By following established protocols, healthcare professionals can minimize the risks of adverse events or complications during and after pain management treatments.

Improved Outcomes

The implementation of consistent policies and procedures promotes better patient outcomes. By providing evidence-based guidelines, the platform empowers healthcare professionals to make informed decisions, leading to the best possible pain management results.

Acute Pain Service: Platform, Policies, & Procedures

In 2018 The Joint Commission published Pain Assessment & Management Standards to be used when evaluating hospitals for accreditation. It was the inspiration for updating a document we started using in 1990. A couple of statements in the TJC Standard imply that its satisfaction will best be achieved by creating an Acute Pain Service (APS).

Chris Pasero, MSN, RN, FAAN and Lex Hubbard, MD, created an APS which is described in this book. Updates to their 1990 manual were necessary to reflect changes in Dr. Hubbard's clinical practice. APS: Platform, Policies, & Procedures can guide hospital committees focusing on TJC Pain Assessment & Management Standards.

Ms. Pasero & Dr. Hubbard were early to adopt an emerging area of special interest in 1989, managing postoperative pain as a hospital service. Dr. Hubbard was on the American Society of Anesthesiologists task force for writing the first ASA Practice Guidelines for Acute Pain Management in the Perioperative Setting published in 1995. Ms. Pasero is one of seven founders of the American Society for Pain Management Nursing (ASPMN). She had a twenty-five-year career as an educator, consultant, lecturer, mentor, and author in this specialized area of nursing. Dr. Rex Hubbard, Lex's twin, enthusiastically adopted new analgesic regimens in his practice of obstetrics and gynecology.

Why "Platform?" Lex realized that proactively managing pain improved surgical outcome. He became obsessed with anesthesiologists' roles in patient care beyond the post-anesthesia care unit (PACU). The Acute Pain Service can serve as a platform not only for managing pain, but also for managing surgical outcome, or Managed Outcome Service (MOS). Think of it as a head start for another "would be" TJC Standard for Improving Surgical Outcome. Rex and Lex are owners of LJ MedData and SurgeryProtocols.com, a website providing insight and services for managing acute pain and surgical outcome.
