Being from Baltimore, Maryland the things you are exposed to can shift a persons mindset to a detrimental state. I want my words to shed light on the "not so seen beauty " this city produces. It's not about the violence, the turmoil, or the pain. It's about becoming something far greater than what's normalized currently in black communities. With topics ranging from: self love, sensuality, inner peace, divinity, black edification, love and an array of many others it is my hope to bring healing to my city. Memoirs Of A Black Boy allows the reader to see the world from a different lens, a lens that is void of stagnicity. It is my hope that the literature written on once blank pages will be a medicine that permanently mutes emptiness . . . that the canvas of my words will make its spectators full.
