| In Ancient Hebrew there was no space between words, nor chapters in scrolls, nor vowels, nor punctuation of any kind... one had to learn to "correctly divide The Word of God" as they used to teach, it had to be parsed carefully to distinguish the actual intended meanings based on specific contexts, as well as the additional meanings of words and sentences overlapping others, all of which were potentially valid and some of which were very intentionally valid even within the same very specific overlapping contexts. All Non-Hebrew "Translations" therefore lack some of the additional Hebrew. | | | |  TAV = 400 "th" or "t" A mark, sign, "x" or cross, owner (tap, to seal, covenant, join two things together, the last |  SIN/SHIN = 300 "s" or "sh" Teeth, ivory, point of a rock, a peak, to devour, consume, destroy, something sharp, El Shaddai |

Ancient Hebrew as it appears on the very earliest stone carvings, and the letter meanings.
 There is a definite "art" to accurately translating the sounds of a person's name from any non-Hebrew language into the Hebrew letter sounds, but their given full name once translated shows their mission or destiny in God's plan, yet WE DO have the Dominion to alter our names and thus truly speak into existence our own destiny. Knowing this, "Saul" chose to be known only as "Paul" once he knew Christ, shedding the SHIN of "Saul" and adopting the PHE of "Paul," to become a Mouth / Spokesperson (PHE) of the Flock / Teaching (LAMEDH), instead of it's Destroyer (SHIN) which his former name indicated.

The meaning of "justice" becomes richer and more profound when exploring its Hebrew counterpart, "mishpat." The lexicon reveals that "mishpat" is not just about maintaining law and order; it speaks to the righteous and equitable treatment of individuals. "Mishpat" is a call for fairness, integrity, and social responsibility.
