

The New Paradigm in Academia: Scholarship Reconsidered Priorities of the Professoriate

In today's ever-evolving academic landscape, the role of the professoriate has undergone a significant transformation. No longer confined to the traditional boundaries of research and teaching, scholars are now expected to embrace a broader range of commitments and priorities. The concept of 'Scholarship Reconsidered' has emerged as a guiding principle that challenges the conventional notions of scholarly work. This article explores the key priorities of the professoriate in this new paradigm and examines how these priorities are shaping the future of academia.

The Four Priorities of Scholarship Reconsidered

Scholarship Reconsidered, as outlined by Ernest L. Boyer in his seminal work, emphasizes four interconnected priorities: discovery, integration, application, and teaching. In the traditional sense, research was often seen as the primary focus of scholarly work. However, this new framework emphasizes the need for synthesis across disciplines, the implementation of knowledge in addressing societal challenges, and a renewed commitment to effective teaching.

1. Discovery: Pushing Boundaries of Knowledge

The pursuit of knowledge lies at the heart of academia, and the professoriate now strives to expand the frontiers of understanding through their research. However, in the Scholarship Reconsidered model, the concept of discovery extends beyond individual research papers or publications. Professors are encouraged to engage in innovative interdisciplinary collaborations, facilitating the exchange of ideas and pushing the boundaries of knowledge.

2. Integration: Connecting Diverse Disciplines

In an increasingly interconnected world, the integration of different disciplines is paramount to address complex challenges effectively. The Scholarship Reconsidered model encourages scholars to bridge disciplinary boundaries and foster meaningful collaborations. By integrating diverse perspectives, professors can develop innovative solutions that draw on the strengths of various academic fields.

3. Application: Impacting Society Positively

Academic knowledge must no longer remain confined within the walls of institutions. The Scholarship Reconsidered model emphasizes the importance of applying scholarly expertise to benefit society at large. Professors are encouraged to engage with communities, policymakers, and industry partners to address real-world challenges and make a tangible impact. This emphasis on practical application ensures that academic work contributes meaningfully to social progress.

Shifting faculty roles in a changing landscape

Ernest L. Boyer's landmark book Scholarship Reconsidered: Priorities of the Professoriate challenged the publish-or-perish status quo that dominated the academic landscape for generations. His powerful and enduring argument for a new approach to faculty roles and rewards continues to play a significant part of the national conversation on scholarship in the academy.

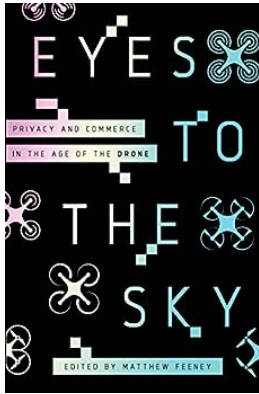

Though steeped in tradition, the role of faculty in the academic world has shifted significantly in recent decades. The rise of the non-tenure-track class of professors is well documented. If the historic rule of promotion and tenure is waning, what role can scholarship play in a fragmented, unbundled academy? Boyer offers a still much-needed approach. He calls for a broadened view of scholarship, audaciously refocusing its gaze from the tenure file and to a wider community.

This expanded edition offers, in addition to the original text, a critical that explores the impact of Boyer's views, a call to action for applying Boyer's message to the changing nature of faculty work, and a discussion guide to help readers start a new conversation about how Scholarship Reconsidered applies today.
