This book contains some of the most incisive and probing psychological profiles of all the key people involved in the case of Rebecca Zahau. It reads like a work from a trained FBI profiler who looks at the evidence meticulously as a means to understand the victim and the UNSUB. One of the most beautiful and impactful statements in this book was the use of surrealism - in art (Dali) and the surreal nature of the crime scene - staged to resemble a suicide but in essence looked like a struggle for life and scramble to cover up a homicide.
